

Couch grass treatment

Time to Work and Product

We use a very specific product for couch grass treatments. It's a very slow weed killer and selectively kills couch and many other grasses. It will not harm your plants! It can take up to 6 weeks to fully control the grass. It may look like nothing is working for the first 2 weeks, this is normal.

People/Pets and Drying time

Allow this product ample time to dry before pets or people re-enter the area, again drying time depends on the weather and can take 1 – 4 hours. Please use common sense.

When to dig it out

Couch grass is a very hardy weed and it's best to wait the 6 weeks or more until it's completely dead to remove it. This will save hours in the long run.

Will it come back?

Overtime it will, unless we (or you) maintain the garden. The aim of treating your couch is to give the garden a headstart in getting back on track. Like all weeds, if you don't stay on top of Couch Grass you can expect it to be back.

Does it still need to be dug out once it is dead?

Yes, it will need to be removed but the time to dig it out will be reduced.

Mulching

We recommend you wait 6 weeks after treatment when the grass is completely dead before removing and mulching.

Note – Mulching is by far the best form of long term weed suppression in garden beds. Placing a thick layer of mulch will give you the best long term result.

Allow 2 weeks to see the progress of our Couch grass treatment.

Wait 6 weeks after a treatment before removing dead Couch grass.

Treated lawn is safe for use after 1 – 4 hours drying time.
